In the ear of IoT, as sensors are generating big data, there is demand on techniques to extract hidden information and use them for query processing. In this research we propose a novel framework for predictive analysis in smart environments. We combine big data techniques and situation-aware computing to build a new framework in order to efficient analysis.